Mary's University, studying abroad benefited from the experience, according to students who have met their faith, history and classroom, Stephens said. "The healthier lifestyle impacts education," said Monica Stefani, a junior at Benedictine College, another student abroad.

Stephens said she learned so much about her faith, history and self.

"Everything had a story, and it solidified and strengthened so much of what I learned in the classroom," she added.

"It was one of the most religious experiences I’ve ever had," DeMoura continued. "I became friends with these people I was visiting relics of and understood more about my faith, which sparked an interest in learning more about the Church as I continued on my journey, it occurred to me that our faith was a part of our culture and not only about history and the church."

DeMoura reported she was exercising her mind spiritually and body as she explored through Basilica of San Francesco, Italy, but she was also aware of the Church's influence on society, and how it’s presence is felt in Florence, Italy.

"It is a life changer," said John Boyle, who took a yearlong course at the University of St. Thomas in St. Paul, Minnesota. He has been involved in the Rome semester St. Thomas offers, helping to oversee the program’s success and serving as an assistant faculty member twice.

He emphasized the unified aspects of community life, spirituality and academics evident in studying abroad with a Catholic university, specifically in Rome: "The thing about Rome is that it is in many ways the heart of the Church," he said. "Part of the experience of our students is being in Rome, experiencing the universality of the Church."

DeMoura is a graduate of Benedictine College with a 2018 summer internship. Information is based on schools with study-abroad programs: Aquinas College, Ave Maria University, Beloit Abbey College, Benedictine College, Christian College, The Catholic University of America, DePaul University, Dominican College, Franciscan University of Steubenville, John Paul the Great Catholic University, Saint Mary’s University of Minnesota, Thomas Aquinas College, Thomas More College of Liberal Arts, University of Mary, University of St. Thomas, Walsh University and Wyoming Catholic College.

OFF-CAMPUS: Students, such as those from Benedictine College shown in Rome at Mother Teresa’s canonization and in Siena, Italy, being taught by Father Scott Murphy, in fall 2016, expand their educations abroad.

In seeking, we are found.

At the University of Mary, our students have the profound opportunity to study at our Rome campus, where they experience in person the cradle of Christianity and the glories of art, culture and history. To be in the presence of the sacred places of the Faith, to walk where the Apostles walked, is a life-changing gift. In addition to Rome, our students can also study in Peru and other wonderful cultural centers around the world.
